NORWALK ACADEMY

The old Norwalk Academy was located in Section 24, one and one-half miles north of the present town of Valliant.

The ruins of this old Indian school are in a very out of the way place and are hard to reach. The spring is concreted up and still affords plenty of water. It is known today as Sand

Spring. Just one hundred steps northeast of the spring one can still find the ruins of the school basement. The brick which have been unearthed are still in good condition. This location is now owned by Charles E. Farrall of Valliant.
