NEWS ITEM OF ISPARHECHER

Learning that Chief Isparhecher had a case in court -- or rather, that Spi's superintendent of instruction has an injunction suit against him -- a reporter squirmed around and found that the high chief of the Creeks had endeavored to "fire" his superintendent and that the latter refused to stay "fired," and is endeavoring to restrain said chief. The case was to have been tried today, but from some cause was postponed till Monday.

Just why a man is not allowed to discharge any person whom he has given a job, is not apparent thus far, but if one feels any interest in finding out he can no doubt do so by running against the court house Monday morning.
